A MONTLAKE MYSTERY.
Mr. A. Braxton Hicks held an inquiry at the mortuary, Montlake, into the circumstances attending the death of an infant male child, name unknown, whose body was found on the towing-path at Hammermill on the 22nd ult.—William Blackwell, pier-master at Hammermill, said that on the 22nd ult. he found a parcel, saw with care in a place of blue silt. He reported it and found the death of a child. The parcel was lying on the stone under the bridge.—Dr. James Adams, divisional surgeon of police, said that the cause of death was suffocation. A verdict of wilful murder against some person or persons unknown was returned.

THE SPINNING-HOUSE CASE.
It is stated that Miss Daisy Hopkins, who was recently released from which the action will be based, is that on the night of her arrest she was taken to the Spinning-house, a late hour and had no cold water given her, that she was given dry bread and tea after her trial. She received for dinner a piece of coarse meat, which she believed to be "lights," two unskinned potatoes, and cold water. She had no tea. For supper, at 7 o'clock, she had some warm water. She was the average dirty every day during her confinement, and the bed she had to sleep upon was a coarse mattress, hammock slung from the walls. She was compelled to wash at the pump, and although she complained of being ill, she was not allowed out the court and as the morning with cold water and a brick and immediately after the arrival of the woman who visited the Spinning-house while she was at work, he ordered her to assist as she was not well enough to do it. She also complains that she was made a public show of in the Spinning-house, and that a visitor insisted on her being kept in the house, notwithstanding her character, and was suffering from the evil effects of her life. The house adjoining the Spinning-house, occupied by the children of the police, overlooked the premises, and the servants there made objectionable remarks to the prisoner. She complains that the women of the premises are filthy, and that the only comfort in the cells is obtained by lighting gas jet for about an hour every evening before 6.30.

EXTRAORDINARY ESCAPE OF PRISONERS.
An escape of five prisoners confined at Montpelliér took place, says a Paris correspondent, in the early hours of Tuesday morning. According to one account, a prisoner named "Gautier" called to his cell the warder, and strangled him. Gaumaud then took the key and opened four other cells. The prisoners then gained the street without difficulty. About 6 in the morning the absence of a warder was noted, and a prisoner was seen working as well as the dead body of the inmate supposed to have been killed. The refusing to join his five comrades. Another version states that three prisoners occupied the same cell managed to make their way partially out, the door to their immediate quarters having carelessly been left open. The three, after reaching a certain passage, were forced to follow his companions. The latter thereupon cut the bed cords and strangled their companion. They then proceeded to the warder's lodge, threw themselves upon him, and strangled him. With the keys they opened three other cells, occupied by prisoners of the period of eight years' hard labour. Two others in the same cell, it is to be noted, say that they were completely unconscious of anything having taken place. The three then descended to the first cell, opened another cell, and then they passed to the street by a tunnel, and escaped by the high road. The news of the escape, with full particulars, has been telegraphed throughout France.

FATAL BOILER EXPLOSION.
Mr. Troubette, corner for Westminster, held an inquiry at St. George's Hospital, into the death of William Joseph, a private in the 6th Grenadier Guards, who was killed on December 24th Vincent informed that some hot-water pipes were jumping. The boiler was in the pantry, and the pipe which was thrust through the ceiling, the condenser, the boiler, and the pipes, were used for heating purposes. Witness examined the pipes in the kitchen, and a moment later there was a loud explosion in the pantry where the deceased and another servant were.

Mr. Troutbeck, coroner for Westminster, held an inquiry at St. George's Hospital, i

Inspector Dowty, one of the society's officers, said he visited defendant's farm on December 17th and found four cows in a poor, weak, and emaciated condition. The bones of twelve cows were sticking out very prominently, and two suffering from sore. By putting his hands upon them he could have pushed them over. There was very little grass in the field; the cattle could hardly walk about, and he told Mr. Wood the privilege granted them by the author to "make business." Fun is at its height in the school room kept by Mother Bunch, at least that is the purpose for which it is, when not "squeezed" out of the room. All the scenes turn up here on examination day, and a really good comic scene is the result. For spectacle the scene is changed to Wood Nymph's Dell, where a ballet is danced that does credit even to a stage-manager of Mr. Cohen's caliber. None of the dances, however, are as popular as the one of Miss Annie Elliott, who trips so neatly as to prettily round the stage. After this ballet the Brothers Polunki give a special entertainment, all of which materially helps to strengthen the case for the Grand Old Cottage in Forgivable Dall is a scene that will not fail to please the little ones for it is here that the Wolf, having disposed of the old lady, seeks to repeat the same process with her granddaughter. The comedy and the farce in this scene, both the interior and exterior of the cottage at the same time, and Little Red Riding Hood approaches it with an appropriate song such as may be as of "Maggie Murphy's Home." The hall pantomime is a very long and very funny, very neatly turned to serve the purpose of the author, and some very good choruses as the result. There is a truly magnificent transformation, devised in Mr. Cohen's best style, with a rollicking harlequinade, and the Alibi scene, which is a very good one, and which with the success of the production in the matter of comedy, and so too in the Brothers Polunki. The Sisters Lillie and we well oat as Boy Blue and Red Riding Hood, and the characters to some extent, and the characters to some extent. Miss M. Gurney, Miss Louis Glibb, Miss A. Bell, Miss Connie Melnotte, and Miss L. Stanley have good singing parts. Mr. A. Bell puts in some good work as Bear. The singing is perfect, and the acting of a most entertaining kind, and the performance of the pantomime.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.
In "Little Bo-Peep," Mr. D'Esterre secured a pantomime that will doubtless please his patrons. The title is somewhat of a misnomer, as Bo-Peep is greatly overshadowed throughout by the Widow and her two sons. This trio make a fine bring about of a laugh by their exuberant antics, perhaps, one ought not to unduly emphasize this deviation alike from traditions of fairy lore and custom. We shall not attempt to follow the action of the play, but we can say that we may mention that the village of Barton Goodwood Lacrosse, the Mystic Valley of "Arcturion" and the transformation of "Arcturion" struck us as being excellent examples of the scenic art. The company engaged for the interpretation of the production we may mention that Fanny Guyton vocalizes sweetly, and her changes in color are really wonderful; as a pair; Miss Rose Hamilton makes a good Boy; Blue; Miss Hetty Lane does for a girl; and Margery Daw; Mr. E. Boyd and Johnny Horner a capital part, and was of great assistance; Messrs. Hargrave, Villiers and J. English are also responsible some capital parts; and the same might be said of Messrs. Ryan and Began. If we are any fault to find, it would be that the chorean art is too lavishly introduced in the show. The pantomime has been put with evident care, and with a good deal of detail which is most commendable; and D'Esterre has the support and thanks of his patrons for the manner in which he catered for them.

SURVEY.
Messrs. Conquest and Spry have taken the subject of their Christmas annual from the story of "The Fair One with the Golden Locks," and a very interesting and amusing survey of a nursery story which they have contrived. Mr. Soames has done justice to the authors in his scenic illustrations and effects in connection with the plot, notably in the representation of an ancient British cavern during the pre-arranged time, a turret in the Tower of London, a realistic view of a typical Chinese palace, one of the funniest yet original effects for which Mr. Conquest is famous in bringing before the minds of the spectators comparisons between giants and dwarfs, and, at the same time, the stage is swayed by legs, and then by arms, the effect being as interesting as it is ludicrous, and this latter requisite in these days is too often wanting in pantomime and burlesque. A cleverly contrived evolution of the Irish and Scotch nationalities is also to be commended. As the other scenes are up to the usual Survey mark of excellence—in fact, more so—Mr. Conquest has engaged a capital company to enact and interpret the story, the principal characters being Misses A. Farrell, A. Westfield, Lytton, L. Laurel, L. Dyson; Messrs. G. Coquest, jun., H. Fortescue, H. Brayne, Danby, and F. Conquest, all of whom are singing, and comport themselves with the most perfect propriety and command. Some of the incidental acts introduced by Messrs. Walter and Lester. The vocal music by Mr. Brann, and the incidental and ballet music by Mr. G. Phillips, are all that could be desired. The scenic effects by Mr. L. Wilford and Messrs. Walter and Hadden take part in a lively and diverting kind. Taken altogether, Mr. Conquest's latest Yuletide annual is one that will amuse the elders as well as the young people, and reflects credit on all concerned in its production. It would have, as it deserves, a successful run.

SANGER'S AMPHITHEATRE.
Mr. George Sanger has produced a pantomime, properly so called, but introduces to the London public a more enjoyable and varied entertainment. The scenes in the ring are all of a capital order, and the variety of the display of the kind now being given in London should prove popular with all grades until the children and young people return to school. The novelty of the place, the place and the pastime, entitled "St. Petersburg at Christmas," and lively and humorous spectacle it is, in course of which are introduced to the spectators sledge and sulky races, competitions between village and town construction, the various sports of the State and private sledge of the Czar of Russia. It is one of the most novel exhibitions introduced to the London public for many years, and for that reason should prove attractive for a short time. The price of admission is to the fore in the superintendence of and every detail, and, needless to say, the whole of the entertainment goes

STRATFORD.
Mr. Albert Fredericks has chosen the Whitmanian theme as a medium for his new and ambitious production. All the elements required for a successful pantomime it has been turned to excellent account by Mr. C. S. Parker, an author who book literally abounds with puns and topical allusions, and local interest. The story is a wonderful legend of days long ago; Of the Cat, and the Rat, and the Bells of Old Bury, successfully produced here on Boring in August, 1894, and the success was so great, the pleasure they felt in witnessing the broad and merry scenes placed before them, that a quick succession. There are fourteen scenes in all, and a grand transformation table is used. The scenery is painted by Messrs. Hillyard and Fredericks, while the stage effects are very elaborate and highly creditable to Mr. Charles Bonner, the producer, who seems to have made the room lately placed at his disposal by a rotation.

The music, composed arranged by Mr. F. Merry, is a faultless performance, and the ballads are sung by Miss L. Bishop, whose charming presence makes her a dashing attraction, and she receives excellent support from Miss Kate Fredericks, a charming representative of Alice Fitzwarren. Both excellent vocalists and excellent dancers, they are very entertaining act; Mr. Fredericks, in an excellent make-up, exceedingly strong as Idle Jack; and Mr. Clement is a very quaint Fitzwarren. The is the rather lively, though not so good as the comedy, composed by Mr. Brooks. Princess, prettily played by M. Beckett; an Emperor, a Chamberlain, good and bad fairies, and other nauticaal mythological characters, all of which are capable hands. The gorgeous picture, of "A Fairy Wedding," a very good subject for a display of this nature, and following it comes a laughable harlequinade, in which Mr. James Grovins appears as the principal character. The W. Clithens, a harlequin, and Miss Clara as clown. Altogether this is a pantomime in which frolic, combined with good singing and dancing, are the chief points, and it should

FUNERAL OF THE DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE.

The remains of the late Duke of Devonshire, which had been removed from Holker to Chatsworth early on Christmas morning, were interred in Edensor churchyard the next day in the portion set apart for the members of the Cavendish family. The body, which was contained in a leaden shell, the outer coffin being of polished oak with massive brass mountings. The inscription was "William Cavendish, Duke of Devonshire, born 27th April, 1800; died 21st December, 1891." The funeral took place on the 29th of the month, the funeral march being led by the Duke's sons, the Marquess of Hartington, Mr. Victor Cavendish, M.P., Mr. Richard Cavendish and Mr. John Cavendish followed the hearse on foot. The remainder of the house party were: Admiral and Lady Louisa Egerton, Miss Blanche Egerton, Miss Dorothea Egerton, Miss Christiana Egerton, Lady Frederick Cavendish, Colonel Lancelotti, the Hon. Mary Lancelotti, Mr. William Egerton, and Colonel William Cavendish. The hearse was preceded by a number of the duke's tenantry who also officiated as bearers. Lord Waldegrave represented the Duke's household, and were represented by the duke's numerous body. The officiating clergy were the Rev. J. Hall, chaplain to the late duke, the Bishop of Southwell, Canon Andrews, the Rev. W. S. King, vicar of Honkborough. The coffin lid was covered with a magnificent flowered cross of chrysanthemums, and was studded with osmanthus and geraniums, and was surrounded by a foundation of maidenhair fern. Other wreaths were from the Queen, the town and trade of Eastbourne, Mr. E. H. Power, Lismore, the vicar and churchwardens of Eastbourne, Sir James Ramsden, the servants at Devonshire House, the staff of Holker, the Mayor of Leeds, the hon. Sir John Lubbock, the Mayor and Corporation of Harrow and Furness.

FATAL FIRE AT BATH.

A fire broke out early on the 20th inst. at 2, Nelson-place, West Bath, the residence of Major-general Crocroft. The family, managed to escape, with the exception of one of the daughters named Alice, a child of seven years of age, who was burned to death. She appears to have followed her mother part of the way down the staircase, and then to have suddenly turned back. A few moments afterwards the stair was turned down so that the escape of the child, who is believed to have been somewhat deaf, was impossible. Notwithstanding the most diligent search the firemen and police had up to a late hour failed to discover the slightest trace of the body. A servant girl was severely injured and is in a critical condition. Major-General Crocroft is believed to have escaped by the back door, and that the inmates escaped by walking along the roof to an adjoining house. It is not known how the fire originated.

TORPID LIVER.
THE CAUSE OF MOST DISAGREE-ABLE SYMPTOMS.

HOW TO REMEDY IT WITH FRASER'S SULPHUR TABLETS

THIS skin is a thick, yellow, itchy liquid oozing from the pores, eruptions of which are biliousness, and their complexion are known to be biliousness and therefore they forgetful of the word so "it has been" denotes its character as a disease, as does also the Latin name of "Bile," or Gall. It may be safely said that three-fourths of civilized beings suffer at one time or another from disordered liver, the complexion being thrashed with some and occasional with others.

The trouble with bile or liver is that it causes the blood to become impure and the system to become diseased, and the result is a general weakness, as well as all enjoyment of food and pleasure fails. We wish to convince you of the value of Fraser's Sulphur Tablets in the treatment of liver complaints, and wrapped beneath the reasons for their success.

The work is done by the removal of the waste material from the blood, and the removal of the waste material from the blood is the work of the kidneys. The system is then ready for another dose. It is to the regular, continuous regulation of the dose that the greatest benefit is certain to be derived. We are apt to do as we imagine, don't we? don't we? don't we?

The effect of "Fraser's Sulphur Tablets" coming through the skin is to open the pores and cleanse them from obstructions and taint, and this, aided by the purifying effect on the blood itself, and the disinfection of all the pores of the body from the blood in the treatment of the skin, is the work of "Fraser's Sulphur Tablets" in the treatment of the skin, and the cure in the treatment of the skin.
